

Subject: AP Seminar Grade Level: 10-12
Units and Pacing	Unit 1: Introduction and QUEST 1 week	Unit 2: Surviving within a Class System 5 Weeks	Unit 3: How to Survive Evolution 3 weeks	Unit 4: A Struggle for Survival and Demand for Resources 4 weeks	Unit 5: Team Project and Presentation 9 weeks	Unit 6: Individual Research-Based Essay and Presentation 10 weeks
Transfer Goals	-Understand MLA Format • Employ team collaboration with a focus on incorporating multiple lenses and perspectives	• Be able to write a claim/thesis statement based on topic research • Write a summary of research • Determine credibility of sources after completing research	• Applying alternate/competing arguments to a claim • Find evidence to support a claim • Develop line of reasoning in argument	• Incorporate visuals, data, and media into argument and presentation • Research counter-arguments to strengthen claim/thesis	• Create a team multi-media presentation • Identify and research a real-world problem or issue • After identifying a real-world problem, develop a solution or resolution to the problem	• Analyze stimulus materials from the College Board • Write a 2000 word research paper incorporating stimulus material
Enduring Understandi ngs	• Fostering constructive team climate, resolving conflict, and facilitating the contributions of all members allow teams to address complex, open-ended problem • Students explore complexities of one	• Students gain an understanding of the issues of the day through a variety of activities	• Alternate or competing arguments can help to strengthen a claim • Claims need to be linked with evidence	• Visuals, media, and data help to support an argument • Inductive and deductive reasoning help to form hypotheses and theories	• According to College Board students will be working independently on their research project. Teacher will be facilitating work following guidelines outlined by College Board.	• According to College Board students will be working independently on their research project. Teacher will be facilitating work following guidelines outlined by College Board.